

Grey County Awards Tender for Durham Paramedic Base

Grey County has awarded the design and construction tender for a replacement Paramedic Services Base in Durham to Domm Construction Ltd. at a cost of $2,415,500. The current base in Durham is at end of life and needs to be rebuilt to meet growing service demands. Council made the decision at the September 12 session of committee of the whole.

“Our paramedics play an important role in community healthcare. As a council, we understand the significance of investing in our emergency services for the safety and wellbeing of our residents,” said Grey County Warden Brian Milne. “With rising call volumes amplifying the need for stronger and faster medical response times, Grey County is taking proactive steps to maintain service levels.”

The Paramedic Services Comprehensive Deployment Review 2023 to 2033 recommended the construction of a new paramedic base in the town of Durham. The land was purchased from the Municipality of West Grey for $150,000. The road and servicing works that will service both the paramedic base and the police station lands will be completed this year by West Grey, with the County paying its proportionate share of the road and services that will front along the Paramedic Base lands.

The project is to be funded from the Durham base reserve, land ambulance development charges and a debenture.

The base is being designed with energy efficiency in mind in alignment with the Grey County Climate Change Action Plan. Applications for funding from the Federation of Canadian Municipalities (FCM) have been submitted, and if successful will allow for the Paramedic Base to be fully net zero (through the addition of solar panels added to the roof, etc.) while still ensuring that the overall project comes in under budget.

Grey County Committee of the Whole September 12th

- Shannon McGavin spoke to council about The Well Community Collective. The organization collaborates, co-designs and partners with youth and communities to create equitable, accessible and low-barrier youth wellness services in Grey, Bruce, Huron and Perth counties. The Well Community Collective is looking to raise $6 million for capital projects and programming to open four hubs. Council will provide a letter of support for the organization.
- Grey County will purchase coaching and facilitation resources from ICLEI Canada to support the development of a Grey County Climate Adaptation Plan. Adaptation is a priority of the County's overall Climate Change Action Plan, Going Green in Grey. ICLEI is an international leader whose framework is already being used by 120 municipalities in Canada.
- Grey County will buy eight additional mechanical CPR devices. These units have proven to be as effective as manual CPR and can be used by paramedics on calls when prolonged CPR is warranted.
- Council awarded the design and construction tender for the Durham paramedic base to Domm Construction with a bid of $2,415,500. The current base in Durham is at the end of its life and needs to be replaced and expanded to meet projected service demands.
- Council received an initial report on Official Plan Amendment 23 which proposes changes to the County's rural designation permitted uses and development policies. The amendments add clarity to wording in the plan to better protect rural designated lands from development activities that do not align with the intent of the plan. Consultation will be had with local municipalities and a complete public process is planned for the coming months to collect comments and feedback.
- On August 24, the province released the final draft of the 2024 Provincial Planning Statement which will come into effect on October 20. Grey County had the opportunity to submit comments on previous drafts. Council received an information report highlighting the updates.
- Grey County and local municipalities are exploring a shared-service model for planning services. The matter was discussed in closed session at a joint meeting of all councils in August.
- County Council approved a report directing staff to formally request feedback from member municipalities on the shared service model by October 18th.

Ontario Expanding Access to Palliative Care

TORONTO — The Ontario government is connecting more people to comfortable and dignified end-of-life care, close to their community and loved ones by adding up to 84 new adult hospice beds across the province. This expansion will bring the total number of publicly funded hospice beds across Ontario to 768.

As part of Ontario's 2024 budget, the provincial government is investing up to $19.75 million in capital funding to build 84 new adult hospice beds and 12 new pediatric hospice beds. An Expression of Interest (EOI) for the new adult hospice beds opens today with beds expected to be operational by 2027. Existing hospice residences or other applicants who wish to develop or expand new hospice beds can reach out to their local Ontario Health Region for details.

Through this process, Ontario is also looking for applicants with longer term expansion opportunities to meet the future needs of Ontario's growing communities. Since 2018, Ontario has invested over $26.5 million to add 153 new hospice beds, bringing the total to 768, giving more families the option of high quality and dignified end-of-life care.

Ten new pediatric hospice beds have already been added for Keaton's House – Paul Paletta Children's Hospice, the first pediatric hospice in Hamilton, and two new pediatric hospice beds at Roger Neilson Children's Hospice located at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario (CHEO).

Province Delivers Affordable Energy for Southwestern Ontario

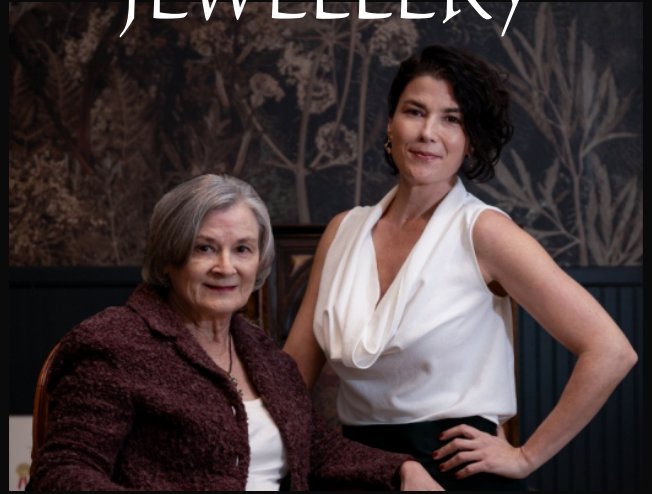

The Ontario government along with Hydro One announced the completion of refurbishments at the Beck #2 Transformer Station in Niagara Falls. This $135 million infrastructure program will extend the life of the existing station by another forty years and ensure a reliable supply of affordable and clean energy that will enable new homes, new investments, and new jobs in southwestern Ontario.

Ontario's Independent Electricity System Operator has forecast that electricity demand will increase by 60 per cent by 2050 as a result of new investments, new homes, and electrification. The refurbished station connects more than 1,500 megawatts (MW) of clean, hydroelectric generation through its 230kV transmission circuits. Work at the Beck #2 Transformer station began in 2016 and included the replacement of all switchyard equipment, including circuit breakers, high-pressure air system, and disconnect switches.

The Beck #2 Transformer Station is home to four of the twenty-six interties Ontario has with its neighbouring jurisdictions. This refurbished transformer station is critical infrastructure that helps to ensure reliability in both New York and Ontario. Refurbishing transmission infrastructure like the Beck #2 station is just one part of the government's plan to meet growing energy demand and reduce emissions by expanding Ontario's clean, reliable, and affordable energy grid, including:

- Nuclear Energy – Advancing clean, reliable, and affordable nuclear power through pre-development work at Bruce Power on the province's first large-scale nuclear build in 30 years, four small modular reactors at Darlington and supporting Ontario Power Generation's plan for refurbishing the Pickering Nuclear Generation Station.
- Hydroelectric Energy – Investing in existing hydroelectric stations, including a $1 billion refurbishment program that the Sir Adam Beck Generating Station in Niagara Falls.
- New Transmission Infrastructure – Designating and prioritizing transmission lines in Southwestern, Northeastern and Eastern Ontario that will power job creators, including EV and EV battery manufacturing and clean steel production.
- Keeping Costs Down – Launching new energy efficiency programs on January 1, 2025, and building on the government's $342 million expansion of existing energy efficiency programs which are helping families and businesses reduce their electricity usage and save money on their energy bills.

Ontario Supporting the Largest Indigenous-led Energy Project in Province's History

New transmission lines will ultimately connect 18,000 people in 16 remote Indigenous communities to affordable energy

SACHIGO LAKE FIRST NATION – The Ontario government and Wataynikaneyap (Watay) Power, a First Nations-led company made up of 24 Indigenous communities, are advancing the second phase of the Watay Power Transmission Project, which is the largest Indigenous-led and lengthiest grid connection project in Ontario's history. Through the second phase of this partnership between Ontario and Watay Power, Sachigo Lake First Nation (located 425 kilometres north of Sioux Lookout) will become the latest community to connect to clean, reliable, and affordable energy, ending the community's reliance on costly diesel-powered generators.

"Ontario needs to generate, store, and transmit more power as we face unprecedented growth. It is a priority for our government to expand and connect clean and affordable energy to some of the most remote northern communities, helping improve the quality of life of First Nation communities as we work to displace all diesel generators with clean electricity," said Stephen Lecce, Minister of Energy and Electrification. "We are proud to support Wataynikaneyap Power and Sachigo Lake First Nation in the largest Indigenous-led energy project in our province's history that will connect northern communities to clean and reliable energy, unlocking jobs and opportunity for generations to come."

Approximately 1,800 kilometres of transmission line are being built by Watay Power Transmission Project through a government loan of up to $1.34 billion for the project's construction costs to service the remote populations. Once built, the Watay transmission line will connect more than 18,000 people in 16 remote communities and estimated to avoid 6.6 million tonnes of greenhouse gas emissions per year, equivalent to taking almost 35,000 cars off the road.

Sachigo Lake Chief Simon Tait remarked, "On behalf of Sachigo Lake community members, including Elders, youth, and land keepers, we are so pleased to celebrate the community's connected to the provincial power grid. With this connection, we are no longer constrained by the limits of the diesel generators."

The project achieved its first major milestone with the early connection of Pikangikum First Nation in December 2018. Construction on the rest of the project commenced in February 2020 and was substantially completed in summer 2024. The Watay line is estimated to contribute over $1 billion to Ontario's GDP by connecting communities to affordable electricity and well-paying local jobs. Since the project's conception, nearly one thousand First Nation members worked on the construction of the line.

"As someone who has lived and worked as a nurse in remote Indigenous communities across Canada, I can attest to how critical it is to have reliable infrastructure including access to clean, affordable energy," said Greg Rickford, Minister of Northern Development and Minister of Indigenous Affairs and First Nations Economic Reconciliation. "The Watay Power Transmission Project has been a major priority during both my federal and provincial chapters, and I'm proud that our government, under the leadership of Premier Ford, is unlocking unprecedented economic reconciliation opportunities for First Nations across the North."

The government is fostering partnerships with Indigenous and First Nation communities to not only support economic growth in the region but also enhance environmental and health benefits for these communities through emission reductions, enhanced electricity reliability, and the elimination of carcinogenic diesel.

"We are so pleased to be celebrating with Sachigo Lake First Nation today. This has been a remarkable journey, which started over 30 years ago," said Margaret Kenequanash, CEO of Wataynikaneyap Power. "We have followed the Chiefs' mandate to bring cleaner, more reliable power to remote First Nations, with First Nation-led and majority owned infrastructure on the Homelands."

5 Common Myths that Get in the Way of Your Will Power

Your Will can be a powerful tool for creating change in the world. By leaving a gift to charity in your Will, you can have a much bigger impact than you ever imagined. A gift in a Will can turn an ordinary Canadian into an extraordinary philanthropist! Unfortunately, only 5% of Canadians have taken this step. There are 5 common myths that typically get in the way of people exercising their Will power.

1. I can't support both loved ones and my favourite causes:

Most people choose to leave everything they have to their family and loved ones. On the surface, this makes sense. However, a careful calculation can demonstrate that a small percentage of your estate left to charity still leaves plenty to support your loved ones.

Also, the reality is that your estate will be taxed - perhaps more than you realize. Choosing to support charities that you care about can reduce, and even eliminate the taxes to be paid. Your financial advisor can help make sense of this for your particular situation.

2. I need to be wealthy to make a gift to charity in my Will:

The vast majority of charitable gifts in Wills are left by Canadians of average means. You may be surprised to find that when all of your assets are realized, you too will have a tidy sum for support of both loved ones and a few favourite causes.

It is estimated that if only 3.5% more ordinary Canadians included a gift in their Will in the coming decade, this would result in $40 billion being directed to charitable causes. No matter the size of your estate, you can be a part of this impressive movement for change.

3. Leaving a gift in a Will is complicated:

Leaving a gift to charity in your estate can be as easy as adding a clause to your Will. Notify your lawyer or notary, and they can take care of adding it in. You'll need to provide the legal name of the charity, its charitable number and the amount you wish to give.

We encourage you to involve your loved ones in these decisions. Make the process about celebrating who you are, the values you hold and the life you lead.

4. I've already written my Will and there is no going back:

The truth is you can amend your Will at any time. Adding a gift is as simple as making your intentions known to those who drafted your original documents.

5. I will never see the impact of the gift I make in my Will:

It can be discouraging to think that you won't be around to see the impact of the gift you leave in your Will. We understand that you would rather do what you can now. Absolutely! However, you and many other Canadians will never be able to make as big a donation while you are alive as you can through your Will (when the value of your estate is realized). So, here are three ways you can see the impact your future gift will have:

- Make a few smaller donations or volunteer in support of a cause you love. You'll become more engaged with the charity and get a better feel for what the impact of your future gift will be.
- Many charities have legacy societies to help provide donors a sense of the impact their future gift will have. Let charities know that you've included a gift in your Will and become a part of these groups that will demonstrate the difference you will make after you're gone.
- Finally, a gift in your Will can help loved ones feel part of the impact you will have, as many charities involve family in the acknowledgement and recognition of your gift. It can be comforting to know that your loved ones will remain connected with you through your contribution.
